section is an NCO School, and therefore has a special organization. The gun platoons are not divided into half-platoons, but into four gun squads, each with a single gun. The commander of the 1st Battery is Lieut. János D. Szabó. The battery has a radio squad and two platoons. Its strength is five officers, 14 NCOs and 125 to 130 men. The 2nd Battery is similarly organized. The men of the 1st Section are mixed, half of them belonging to older classes, back to 1922. NCO training lasts four months; the personnel is thus changed three times a year. The 1st Battery is armed with eight AT guns, 57 mm; the 2nd Battery with eight 76.2 mm AT guns.

6. The 2nd Section is 280 to 290 strong and consists of two batteries. The 3rd Section has 255-270 men and two batteries. The 2nd Section has twenty-two 57 mm AT guns, and there has been discussion of organizing a third battery under it. The 3rd Section has eight 76.2 mm AT guns.
7. Firing exercises are held on the target range at Bugacpuszt [sig]. The guns fire at 3,000 m range at wooden targets of the size and shape of a tank. Every artilleryman must fire at least twice. Two hits are obtained in every 15 shots. The firing training is considered very good.
8. During 1952 and 1953 reserves of the classes 1922 to 1926 were recalled for refresher training, almost all of them men who served in the artillery in World War II. Between 35 and 50 percent of them became NCOs.
9. Discipline is very severe. The officers are all reliable Communists.
10. The auto park of the regiment consists of six jeeps, 12 trucks, 30 weapon prime movers, and two passenger cars.
11. The old infantry barracks is 620 m north of the railroad station. It has been reconstructed and can take 600 men. It is now occupied by an infantry battalion of 450 to 470 men.
